

Acknowledgements

Several organizations have collaborated to design, pilot, and further refine TeamSTEPPS to make it available for all healthcare organizations. Many individuals contributed a great deal of their time and expertise to the development of the TeamSTEPPS Instructor Guide and its accompanying wealth of materials by developing an evidence-based framework, providing validated measurement tools, incorporating adult-learning methodologies and medical illustrations, reviewing content or making recommendations about the style, identity, terminology, design, and format.

For their expert input to this curriculum, we would like to thank:

We greatly appreciate the tireless efforts of the TeamSTEPPS trainers and coaches who have or are in the process of implementing and sustaining a teamwork initiative in more than twenty-five Department of Defense facilities over the past eighteen months. Their feedback and lessons learned have been invaluable to align this curriculum with training and implementation requirements. The leadership and 'change teams' in these facilities are commended for their steadfast efforts to integrate and sustain TeamSTEPPS in daily practice.

As well, a special acknowledgement to Dr. John Kotter for sharing ideas and giving us the opportunity to incorporate the pre-publication of "Our Iceberg Is Melting: Changing and Succeeding Under Any Conditions" within the change management and implementation modules. This book helped everyone quickly grasp the 8-step process for successful change in an entertaining, yet relevant, way.

A special appreciation to COL Steven Grimes, Director of the DoD Patient Safety Program, the Leadership in the Office of the Chief Medical Officer, and the Patient Safety Planning and Coordination Committee members for leading the Military Health System to a culture of safety, through TeamSTEPPS and a multitude of other patient safety improvement strategies.

Thanks to the teamwork between two large federal agencies, the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality and the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense(Health Affairs)/TRICARE Management Activity) we have been successful to make TeamSTEPPS available to our healthcare community.

Lastly, we want to thank those who set aside time from their already packed schedules to provide brief testimonials. They include a compassionate mom who advocates relentlessly on behalf of patients, a physician champion, a patient safety officer, and senior executives. We are grateful for their commitment to quality, safe healthcare expending valuable resources—most significantly—human capital and time. These recognized leaders remain instrumental in promoting a culture of safety for the patients we serve and everyone involved in our healthcare delivery organizations.
